I've sounded one enduring note. Let me, O Lyre, think up some things That folks will simply have to quote.

A Leshian lyrist owned thee once: He used to sing a lot, he did, Of dames and demijohns and stunts Like that. He was the Tuneful Kid.

Help me, mine ancient ukulele, Sing songs of sorrow and of joy Such as, composed and printed daily. Will make the public yell, "Oh, boy!"

Our entrance into the war has brought about, as so many persens knew it would bring about, a great sympathy between us and the English. "We hope," says Punch, "it is not due to the distraction of war, but America seems to be losing her dash. At a baseball match in New York the other day only three of the spectators were injured." Our English allies already understand our sports, but they err a little in phraseology. Baseball tournament,

Every time, by the way, Punch wants to write something shout Ireland, and can't think of anything, it compromises by spoofing us about Mexico. "It is thought probable," for example, "that Mexico will very shortly decide to declare peace on America."

The New York Tribune quoted, as from the Times, a review of Mr. Frank J. Wilstach's "Dictionary of Similes." The "review" appears to have been sent to it as a printed newspaper cutting by Mr. Wilstach himself. Its tone may be indicated by the sentence: "There is a coarseness about all Transatlantic humo: that we abhor."

The book was never received or reviewed by the Times. Upon ascertaining this fact, the Tribune apologized to its readers and added that it had discovered a new simile: "As untrustworthy as a contribution by Frank Wilstach."-London Times. Business of rubbing it in.

"Then the war will come home to us. Then there will be nothing but the war and everything else will be incidental. And the one thing for which we ought to be grateful is that we have a cause worthy of all the sacrifices that we can make."

While the conference was in session President Wilson designated the week of June 18 to 25 as Red Cross Week, "during which the people of the United "during which the people of the United States will be called upon to give generously and in a spirit of patriotic sacrifice for the support and maintenance of this work of national need."

Mr. Davison, who at the President's request became chairman of the war council, declared the $100,000,000 fund which it is proposed to raise quickly would be only a beginning.

Says We'll Electrify World

"Are the people of this country go-ing to be satisfied," he asked, "with a Red Cross organization which will Red Cross organization which will merely take care of our army here and abroad? Describing the pitiable condition of Northern France, Mr. Hoover said that there alone was room for a work of rehabilitation that would cost $1,500,000,000. The duty of the United States in that field is clear, he declared, "for France is sacrificing her men on a pyre devoted to liberty and a pyre devoted to ever protection."

Both General Pershing and Secretary

Role at the Empire

Trim, slim and vocally at her best, Ethel Barrymore once more trod the stage of the Empire Theatre last night as the typist heroine of Sir James Barric's familiar playlet, "The Twelve-Pound Look."

It was Miss Barrymore's first appearance hereabouts since "Our Mrs. McChesney"—her sole emergence from the screen in something more than a year. And even these performances, it is safe to say, would not be given were it not that the profits will accrue to a war fund, in the interests of which Miss Barrymore is now doing her bit without remuneration. The steam yacht Surf, equipped as a hospital ship for 125 patients, has been presented to the Red Cross by Dr. John A. Harris, and will be accepted by the navy to-morrow in the Hudson River, off Seventy-ninth Street.

Both "The Twelve-Pound Look" and Miss Barrymore's work therein have long been well known, so it need only be added that the substitution of this playlet for the somewhat dreary "Old Friends" renders the programme at the Empire one of the most thoroughly entertaining to be found anywhere in town. In addition to Miss Barrymore's fine performance there is the work of Charles Dalton, the original Sir Harry Sims, who does everything possible for the oppressively successful and slightly overdrawn husband. The new Lady Sims is played satisfactorily by Beatrice Terry, who is reputed to be some sort of relation to the immortal Ellen.

"The New Word" and "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals" combine with "The Twelve-Pound Look" to make up the evening.

The article stated that, after a fair, patient and charitable hearing, the Gimbel establishment, which knew that it had long been under suspicion by The Tribune, and had more recently been on its trial for the privilege of continuing to advertise in The Tribune, had finally convicted itself in such unmistakable fashion that The Tribune had no alternative other than to believe that the special sales policy this morning at the Labor Exchange to

Tribune had no alternative other than to believe that the special sales policy of Gimbel Brothers was a policy of inflated claims, of misrepresentation of values and the imposition upon the credulity of the shopping public; also that the store had been employing advertising not for its proper purpose of pointing the way to sound values and desirable goods at desirable of pointing the way to sound values and desirable goods at desirable prices, but to trick the public with filse claims of value into buying merchandise above its normal price; that advertising space was not for sale in The Tribune for such purposes, and that that was why Gimbels was out. The article also went on to state that the final count in the indictment against the concern was found in its "Birthday Sales" last October, which celebrated the sixth anniversary of its establishment in New York; that such sales had been a series of misrepresentations mainly based upon claims

In addition to the usual technical defences in libel suits, the answer of The Tribune and the other defendants pleads the truth of every defamatory charge made in the article against Gimbel Brothers. It goes with detail into many instances of what the pleading calls "the reprehensible methods" followed in the conduct of the Milwaukee and Philadelphia stores of Gimbel Brothers by those who were of Gimbel Brothers by those who were the controlling and managing execu-tive officers and directors of those houses, as well as of the Gimbel Brothers house in New York.
